WHAT'S NEW • WHO'S HOT • WHAT'S NEXT

LONG LIVE THE QUEEN

Via TV, film and a new album, Aretha Franklin continues to reign

One week after taping a performance for A Celebration of America's Music (ABC, Jan. 3), Aretha Franklin is back in her home near Detroit, working on her long-awaited autobiography. "We're up to 1979 now," she says of her collaboration with writer David Ritz. "In another 15 or 20 years we'll write another one."

With so many new projects to write about, it may have to be sooner. In addition to paying tribute in song to Ella Fitzgerald for ABC, she performed at Karna Gore's wedding, recorded the soon-to-be-released album A Rose Is Still a Rose and filmed a role in "Blues Brothers 2000," which opens Feb. 6. Clearly the Queen of Soul isn't content to merely languish on her throne.

She's not willing to rest on her legendary laurels, either. On her upcoming album, Franklin works with a new generation of artists, including Sean "Puffy" Combs and the Fugees' Lauryn Hill (who wrote the title track and directed its video). And for the "Blues Brothers" sequel—in which she reprises her role from the 1980 original—she recorded a new version of "Respect," 30 years after its initial release.

Did she think twice about messing with a classic? "The first one is timeless, but I believe we topped it," she says. "It's really groovy and greasy and funky. I just love the way it came out."

She's also pleased with her performance in the movie. "I move up in the world in this one," she says. "I'm not the greasy-spoon diner owner; now I own a Mercedes dealership." And she dresses the part. "They did it to the nines this time," she says.

And as a royal perquisite, "they gave me the wardrobe—a couple of suits. And they made beautiful turbans to go with them," she adds. "Very glamorous and sophisticated." —Stef McDonald

SILK STALKER

Best known as Worf on Star Trek: Deep Space Nine, Michael Dorn (left) sheds Klingon makeup on USA Network's Silk Stalkings Jan. 4. He was able to bring interesting nuances to an attempted seduction scene with Stalkings star Janet Gunn since the actors, both single, have been platonic friends for 10 years. (They shared a house when Dorn began his Trek career and Gunn was fresh off a stint as a Dallas Cowboys cheerleader.) "It was refreshing and somewhat startling when my character comes right out and says, 'C'mon, is it because I'm black?'" he says.

Meanwhile, on DS9, Worf faces his own challenges as a newlywed (to Dax, played by Terry Farrell). "Their relationship as co-workers will change," Dorn explains. "Things change when you get married." —José A. Martínez

A MATTER OF PRINCIPAL

When he talks about finals or his girlfriend back in Colorado, Zachery Ty Bryan (left) could be any 16-year-old. It's only when he lets slip that he hung out backstage with Dan Aykroyd and the Rolling Stones or that he spent last summer filming the comedy Principal Takes a Holiday (ABC, Jan. 4) in Vancouver that you remember he plays Brad Taylor on Home Improvement and goes places other teenagers only dream about.

But wherever he may roam, there's no place like Home for Bryan, and the Taylors have become his second family. "I did the pilot when I was 8," he says. "We've worked together so long that we are all very close." So long, in fact, that he can see himself grow up in reruns. "I still watch them," the actor says. "They are kind of like a documentary of my life. When I get older, I'll be able to show my kids the times when I was 9 and 10." —Ari Yolkut

FUTURE SHOCK

TV GUIDE serves as a symbol of culture and community in Kevin Costner's postapocalyptic saga "The Postman." In the scene below, the title character consults a 1997 issue, attempting to reconnect to the past from a future in which the United States government, institutions and communications lie in ruins.

Costner's choice of TV GUIDE and a television set as cultural touchstones was not accidental. "The great thing about television is when it links the world with what's going on," he says. "I would get by without it, but I would miss seeing the great events you can't physically be at. That's something we take for granted."

TV GUIDE also helps set the scene in a current film about the past: "The Ice Storm," director Ang Lee's adaptation of Rick Moody's novel about suburban sex shenanigans in the 1970s. (Watch for the scene in which Christina Ricci dons a Nixon mask.)

—Jeanne Wolf

A SHARP-DRESSED MAN

He has donned period garb to portray a Scottish clansman ("Rob Roy") and a Victorian schoolteacher ("Little Women") and worn contemporary casual as a drug dealer ("Pulp Fiction") and a slacker ("Say Anything"). But in NBC's Blackout Effect (Jan. 4), Eric Stoltz (above) makes a real acting stretch: a guy in a suit. His character, a National Transportation Safety Board official investigating the dangerous state of air-traffic control, is "a tightly wound man—sucking down coffee and spewing out technobabble at high speed," he says, "and one of the best-dressed men I've been allowed to play. It's kind of nice to get gussied up occasionally and be thought of as a normal American." But then, TV becomes Stoltz: He always looks sharp when he drops in on pal Helen Hunt to play her ex-boyfriend on Mad About You.

Stoltz says Blackout Effect is more of an exposé than a thriller. "I probably shouldn't tell you this," he says, "but we got a note from the network during the last week of shooting saying they were concerned that the film was quote unquote very smart. I think they perhaps intended that as a warning, but we all took it as a compliment." Draw your own conclusion: NBC originally slated the movie for the November sweeps period (it's even set during Thanksgiving) but then decided to ground it until this week.

SEEING SPOTS

Jungle fever is hotter than ever, with everyone from Melrose Place's Amanda (Heather Locklear) to Dateline NBC's Jane Pauley sporting leopard prints.

"For a long time, it was really bad taste—like kitschy ladies with poodles," says Jennifer Tilly, who chose a sexy spotted Dolce & Gabbana gown for a recent Keenen Ivory Wayans Show appearance. "But now it's mainstream, so you can have the thrill of being out there but still be a bit conventional."

Kirstie Alley shares a love for leopard with her alter ego on Veronica's Closet, where her character, Veronica Chase, has coats, dresses, even office chairs featuring the feline design.

Over on Just Shoot Me, fashion editor Nina Van Horn's (Wendie Malick) leopard looks include a '50s-style Moschino swing coat, a Kate Spade handbag, an Ungaro miniskirt and a custom-made faux-fur vest. Katie Sparks, the show's costume designer, says of Nina, "She's kind of wild, the type who's happy eating a cigarette and a drink, so leopard fits her."

The look is big with stars off-screen, too. Baywatch's Gena Lee Nolin intends to wear the faux leopard coat she bought at London's Harvey Nichols as much as possible. "It makes you feel playful and fun," she says. "I'll keep wearing it—even if it does go out of style."

SHOWBIZ BUZZ AND CELEBRITY SCOOP

BY MARK SCHWED

Will ABC's No. 1 sitcom be back next season? Richard Karn (right), who has played handyman Al on Home Improvement for seven seasons, says even he doesn't know. "It all depends on Tim Allen," he says. Apparently, Allen is holding off on signing a contract that would pay him $1.25 million an episode until he gets guarantees from ABC about programming changes. "He either wants the show moved to 8 P.M. or to have stronger shows around us," Karn tells me. Not that Karn wouldn't mind moving on. "It'd really be nice to try something different." But no Al spin-off, please. "It's hard to come up with a great premise for that." In the meantime, he's hosting A&E's Foot Soldier, a 13-episode project (kicking off January 7) about history's greatest ground troops.

Decision time

Golden heart

You would think Victoria Rowell (left) is busy enough starring in CBS's Diagnosis Murder and The Young and the Restless. But she somehow found the time to host PBS's Take This Heart (airing January 9) about children in foster care. The reason is very personal: "I was a foster child too," she says. In fact, it was her foster mother, Agatha C. Armstead, who turned her on to the arts. Because of that experience, Rowell has formed her own foundation that provides scholarships to foster kids. "I think we have about 13 children on full scholarships now on both coasts."

Attention Janet Reno (right): You're about to be spoofed on Fox's Ally McBeal. A casting call went out recently from executive producer David E. Kelley's offices for "a dead ringer for our current attorney general." According to the bulletin, Reno, sitting alone in a bar, "is delighted" when smarmy lawyer Richard Fish (played by actor Greg Germann) begins "rubbing her neck...while pretending to brush off some dirt." Later, Reno, "much to everyone's horror takes to the dance floor." The actress who lands the part gets three lines, three scenes and a lifetime of memories. Look for the show February 2.

Ellia English (left) was so hungry to play the heavy woman Gloria in the feature "Waiting to Exhale" that she put on 70 pounds for the audition: "I got lazy and started eating." Unfortunately she didn't get the movie, but she did score the role of the robust Aunt Helen on the WB's The Jamie Foxx Show. Then she wanted to lose the weight. "I had to ask the producers for permission," she says. "I mean, they had hired me to play this big woman." Fans have now watched her drop from 255 pounds to 175. ("I want to hit 150," she says. "A size 10.") How did she do it? Proper diet and exercise, of course.

CHEERS & JEERS

JEERS to coddling celebrities. For one week, Alex Trebek brought together movers and shakers from inside the Beltway and Hollywood, luminaries from Oliver Stone to Oliver North, for Jeopardy! Power Players. Anemic Jeopardy! was more like it. Instead of challenging these well-known contestants with questions that would really gauge their knowledge, Trebek fed them a steady diet of duck soup. "This CBS anchorman is affectionately known as Uncle Walter," "The title fawn in Disney's 1942 film was this deer" and "Concludes the phrase: What you don't know can't—" were representative answers. Hmm, what is "Laying it on too thick," Alex?

Trebek: Showing a decided favoritism for the famous

CHEERS to a clever Christmas conceit. Fox's Mad TV recently aired a sketch, "A Pack of Gifts Now," using stop-action animation. It was a remarkably authentic-looking spoof of the CBS chestnut from 1964, Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer. But "A Pack of Gifts Now" gleefully merged that innocent yuletide yarn with an ingenious and intricate parody of "Apocalypse Now," the 1979 Vietnam War film starring Marlon Brando and Martin Sheen. In this revisionist narrative, Rudolph travels up river to terminate Santa because the Big Guy is giving away gifts, slicing into the profit margins of greedy toy manufacturers. This was the strangest and sharpest satire we saw on television all last year.

JEERS to the old shell game. Nothing confounds viewers as much as when the networks start shuffling the prime-time schedule. CBS found this out the hard way recently when, looking for a competitive edge, it had 48 Hours and Dellaventura swap nights. Result? A disastrous lose-lose situation. On Tuesday, 48 Hours drew 2 million fewer viewers than Dellaventura usually did in the same time period. That Thursday, Danny Aiello's vigilante drama lost an even greater portion of the newsmaga-zine's average viewership. Shortly afterward, the shows switched again, back to their original slots. As Peter, Paul & Mary once warbled: When will they ever learn?

JEERS to setting bad examples behind the wheel. In one car commercial a Cadillac passes a string of imported luxury cars on a winding road divided by a double yellow line (the spot was recently digitally altered to make it a passing lane). In another ad we see a guy driving a van with a bobbing-head figure of what looks like Laugh-In announcer Gary Owens on his dash. The driver starts doing a macarenalike dance with his eyes closed. An air horn sounds, and the guy grabs the wheel in alarm, presumably finding himself in the path of an oncoming truck. A voice-over for a franchise law firm urges people who have been injured to call their toll-free number. Hey, if you can expect to derive compensation from an accident you caused by driving like that—as this ad implies—it's time to reform our liability statutes.

SISKEL ON SCREEN

A DRAMA THAT COULD CHANGE YOUR LIFE

Has seeing a movie ever really changed your life? I actually attended law school in my youth because "Inherit the Wind" and "Anatomy of a Murder" made me want to become a lawyer.

Of the films I've seen more recently, the one most likely to have a direct impact on my actions is Mike Leigh's "Secrets & Lies." Making its premium-channel debut Friday, January 9, on Cinemax, the film tells the unusual story of a black London optometrist (Best Supporting Actress nominee Marianne Jean-Baptiste) who tries to locate the birth mother who gave her away.

Much to her surprise—and ours—the mother (Best Actress nominee Brenda Blethyn) is white. Estranged from her adult brother and raising an illegitimate 20-year-old daughter on her own, the mother is equally shocked when she learns her child is black.

Eventually, the mother and daughter spend some time together, and after the initial shock wears off, a bond begins to form. But their growing friendship becomes strained after Blethyn introduces Jean-Baptiste as an acquaintance from work at a family party.

Now consider the film's title. It strongly suggests that we should confront the past and that by avoiding conflict we only build up walls of resentment, anger and alienation. To the degree that you have secrets and lies in your own life, watching this remarkable film may motivate you to deal with them. We don't normally associate "family entertainment" with serious films, but "Secrets & Lies" could trigger an exciting discussion with the more mature members of your family.

A sidebar: Director Leigh approaches his work in a fascinating, perhaps unique way. Armed only with a character and a plot summary, his actors improvise their dialogue via role-playing. The result is a most unaffected form of screen acting. Other Leigh movies worth renting include "Life Is Sweet" and "Naked."

To be avoided is the comedy "My Fellow Americans," premiering Saturday, January 3, on HBO. Jack Lemmon and James Garner star as former chief executives who hate each other but are united in an effort to survive a plot involving the current president, an overweight jogger played by Dan Aykroyd. The jokes are generic odd-couple material, and the film concludes with—what else?—a tired chase scene. May I issue an executive order to skip this movie?

And finally, here are two very different creature features. Take a pass on "Joe's Apartment," a comedy about a guy living with talking roaches. It debuts Friday, January 9, on Showtime. But do make a date with "Fierce Creatures," premiering Saturday, January 3, on Starz! The cast from "A Fish Called Wanda" (Kevin Kline, John Cleese, Jamie Lee Curtis and Michael Palin) is reunited in a silly romp about an effort to pump up attendance at a dying zoo. The plan? Present all of the animals as killers—even the cuddly ones. Very funny stuff.

AVERAGE JOE

BY JOE QUEENAN

NICK AT NIGHT

Several months ago, I wrote an article about shows whose existence I doubted. These included Paleo-world, U.S. Farm Report and Style With Elsa Klensch. After spending a week staring at my TV, I was able to confirm that all of these shows really did exist. But at the end of the story, I noted that I had not been able to find a single person who had actually seen Nick Freno: Licensed Teacher, the lowest-rated show of the 1996-97 season, and invited anyone who had seen it to write in.

Several weeks later, I received a batch of letters from Nick Freno fans who told me to back off. By batch, I mean about eight. Judging from the latest ratings, these letter writers may constitute the entire Nick Freno audience; when last I looked, it was still checking at the bottom.

The big question is whether Nick Freno is the worst prime-time program, or if it is just a victim of a bad time slot (7:00 P.M./ET on Sunday). To answer this, I watched four episodes and compared it to other programs with similarly poor ratings.

The results are not pretty. Nick Freno is a dimly amusing comedy about a struggling actor turned teacher (Mitch Mullany) in an inner-city school. Ho-ho-ho. Although a few members of the cast are talented in a sitcomical way, Mullany comes across as a poor man's John Ritter, if such an idea is fathomable. The scripts are rotten, the plots are moldy, the characters are generic. Take it from me: This show is horrible.

But is it worse than such cellar dwellers as NBC's Players, CBS's Promised Land, ABC's Teen Angel? Yes, because its production values are so much lower. Is it worse than Fox's recently canceled 413 Hope St.? Yes, because 413 Hope St. starred the guy who used to play Shaft, and it had a point. Is it worse than UPN's The Sentinel? Yes, because The Sentinel, though not technically a comedy, is funnier.

Yet somehow, it seems unfair to single out Nick Freno

as TV's worst show. Though far inferior to such WB fare as The Jamie Foxx Show or Unhappily Ever After—neither of which is very good—Nick Freno is only slightly more unwatchable than the cloying The Parent 'Hood and only slightly lamer than Smart Guy, whose ratings are twice as high. I do not even believe Nick Freno is the worst show on the air. That honor goes to the WB's Alright Already.

One final note: It is a cornerstone of TV mythology that shows like Seinfeld started off with dismal ratings, gradually built audiences then became institutions. Is this likely to happen with Nick Freno? I don't think so. While low-rated programs sometimes become hits, lowest-rated ones rarely do. In 1994-95, the least-watched show was Muscle. In 1995-96, it was Live Shot and Simon. Last year, it was Nick Freno, as it will almost certainly be this year. If Nick Freno ever became a hit, it would be time to close down the country for repairs.

CRAZY FOR THE SIMPSONS

Ay carumba! After nine seasons, America's funniest family is more irreverent—and irresistible—than ever. BY DAVID OWEN

I don't like to cook, my wife hates golf, and our children think fishing is cruel. Just about the only things we do as a family are argue about table manners and watch The Simpsons (Fox, Sundays, 8 P.M./ET). Not every family in America considers The Simpsons wholesome viewing. Doesn't Bart, in one episode, put on his grandfather's dentures, bite the ceiling fan and spin around? Doesn't the show feature a cartoon within a cartoon in which a sadistic mouse routinely disembowels a hopelessly credulous cat? And doesn't Homer invent a delicious cocktail whose secret ingredient is cough syrup? We have friends who forbid their children to watch; they are shocked when we say we plan meals around it.

We watch The Simpsons because we think it's the best thing on TV. My favorite episode is the one in which Homer skips church on a frigid winter morning and ends up having the best day of his life. While Marge and the children shiver in their pew, Homer turns the living-room thermostat to 100 degrees, makes his "patented, space-age, out-of-this-world Moon Waffles" (a bag of caramels, waffle batter and liquid smoke cooked on a waffle iron and then wrapped around a stick of butter) and watches the Three Stooges on TV. "Moe is their leader," he says to himself with ineffable contentment as he lounges on the couch in his bathrobe. When Marge and the children return, Homer makes a case for never going to church again, saying, "What if we picked the wrong religion? Every week, we're just making God madder and madder." Later, 8-year-old Lisa asks, "Why are you dedicating your life to blasphemy?" Homer pats her on the head reassuringly and says, "Don't worry, sweetheart. If I'm wrong, I'll recant on my deathbed."

Like many of the best Simpsons episodes, this one manages to be hilarious and subversive but also, somehow, uplifting. In fact, if the episode has a moral, it's probably something like "Going to church may not be a terrible idea." Yet you never stop laughing. When Reverend Lovejoy refers to Apu's religion as "miscellaneous," Apu indignantly says, "Hindu. There are 700 million of us." Lovejoy smiles at him uncomprehendingly and says, "Oh, that's super."

The Simpsons' most impressive feature is its textual density. Nearly unique among TV comedies, the program has no laugh track because canned guffaws would occupy airtime that could otherwise be used for dialogue. Every episode takes about eight months from conception to broadcast, and during that time, every script is painstakingly fine-tuned and rewritten by a team of as many as 20 writers. Perhaps that's why the characters, while they are literally two-dimensional, have more emotional heft than the flesh-and-blood characters of other sitcoms. Although they have evolved through the years—in early episodes, Homer was a surly authoritarian; today, he is a dreamy dumbbell—the Simpsons have remained that rarest of modern TV species, the intact two-parent family. And although they are almost surreally dysfunctional, they love one another in the idiosyncratically complicated way that real family members do.

Beyond the Simpsons themselves, the show boasts an ensemble of secondary characters worthy of a Preston Sturges movie: Lionel Hutz, the incompetent shopping-mall lawyer who, in one episode, refers to a mistrial as a “bad court thingy”; Principal Skinner, the hapless head of Springfield Elementary who refers to the puma, the school mascot, as “the principal of the mountains”; the Flanderses, the Simpsons’ evangelical-Christian neighbors whose seemingly perfect life drives Homer to distraction.

The Simpsons is the only television show my children watch without simultaneously talking, reading or fighting. They don’t want to miss anything. They can quote long stretches of dialogue from memory and identify uncredited guest appearances, such as that of Dustin Hoffman, who supplied the voice of a substitute teacher. The Simpsons is now in its ninth season, but to me the show doesn’t seem tired. Animation is a blessing in that regard. Leave It to Beaver declined irretrievably when Jerry Mathers hit puberty. Bart, in contrast, will never have to graduate from fourth grade. The show will last until viewers’ tastes change or the writers lose interest. I hope that doesn’t happen for a long, long time. ■

David Owen’s most recent book is The Lure of the Links (Atlantic Monthly Press).

The Simpsons Online! To enter (and maybe win) a Simpsons trivia contest, visit the Simpsons Fun-O-Rama Web page on the TV GUIDE Entertainment Network (www.tvguide.com/simpsons).

Decisions, decisions. TV GUIDE’s list of 12 terrific Simpsons episodes may look tidy, but it’s the result of much agonizing debate and relentless squabbling.

So if by chance one of your favorites is missing, all we can say is, don’t have a cow.

#1 LISA’S WEDDING

Airdate: March 26, 1995

This is the premier example of what makes a Simpsons episode work. We admire its humor as much as we are drawn to its heart and its truth. Here, a fortune-teller predicts an ill-fated romance-to-be for Lisa. Suddenly we’re in 2010: Lisa falls for the handsome Hugh St. John Alastair Parkfield (the voice of Mandy Patinkin) when they both reach for the same book at the university library (shades of “Love Story”!). Hugh lays down the law: Once married, Lisa can have nothing to do with Homer and her siblings. Forced to choose, she opts for her family. “Lisa’s Wedding” (right) makes us realize that we’ve come to know these characters so well that we actually care about what happens to them—in fact, that we believe they have futures and that they change and grow. In that way, they’re really real.

#2 THE WAY WE WAS

Airdate: January 31, 1991

Of all of TV history’s “origins” shows—the episodes that take you back in time and show you how everything in the series got started—there are only a handful of great ones: how John Reid became the Lone Ranger, the beginnings of St. Elsewhere, how Mulder got involved with the X-Files. And this one: a superbly observant, hilarious, perfect time capsule that tells how Homer Simpson wooed and somehow won Marge Bouvier. One night, when the TV breaks, the Simpsons are forced to actually talk, and Marge and Homer relate the tale of how they met in high school detention—he was there for smoking, she for burning her bra (it was 1974). Theirs is an up-and-down romance, but they end up together forever, soul mates of destiny—or, as Bart puts it, “They got married, had kids and bought a cheap TV.”

#3 HOMERPALOOZA

Airdate: May 19, 1996

The generation gap has been standard sitcom fodder for decades. Leave it to The Simpsons to find something fresh to say about it. To convince his kids that he’s cool, Homer takes them to Hullabalooza, a touring rock concert/freak show that features Cypress Hill (right) and offers the chance to "Bungee Jump Against Racism." When a cannon accidentally discharges into Homer's ample midsection and causes no damage, the crowd pronounces him hip. Even though Smashing Pumpkins and Sonic Youth also appear in this episode, it's not about Generation X; it's about the classic tough relationship between fathers and sons and what one will do to be a hero to the other.

#4 KRUSTY GETS KANCELLED

Airdate: May 13, 1993

Under Bart's incorrigibility and Lisa's precocious wisdom, there lurk the hearts of true, believing children. The Simpsons never captured this so perfectly as when the kids' beloved Krusty the Clown (below) is knocked off the air by the ventriloquist Arthur Crandall and his dummy, Gabbo. Incensed when they see their hero Krusty reduced to begging on the roadside (WILL DROP PANTS FOR FOOD), Bart and Lisa organize an entertainment extravaganza to resuscitate his career, successfully recruiting guest stars Johnny Carson, Bette Midler, Luke Perry and Red Hot Chili Peppers to the cause. Krusty gets his show back, the kids get their clown back, and Simpsons fans get a star-packed keeper that in its own twisted way reflects the pure faith and goodness at the heart of every classic children's tale.

#5 TREEHOUSE OF HORROR

Airdate: October 24, 1990

The weekly brilliance of The Simpsons often takes on an added sheen when the writers turn the family loose in familiar pop-culture vehicles—as we saw here, when Homer & Co. stumbled into scary-movie spoofs of "Psycho" and "Fall of the House of Usher" and even a Twilight Zone episode. The first section of this three-part show finds the Simpsons attempting to stay in their new, haunted house overnight, despite blood dripping down the walls. The second sees them abducted by aliens, whose generous catering convinces Lisa that the family is being fattened up for an E.T. feast. The final chapter brings us Lisa reading Edgar Allan Poe's horror classic "The Raven" in the tree house while Homer listens, terrified, in the yard. The trick-or-treat conceit worked so well that it has become a Simpsons tradition.

#6 LIKE FATHER LIKE CLOWN

Krusty the Clown a Hasidic Jew? The concept has oy vey written all over it—unless, of course, you factor in the satirically gifted Simpsons writers. With a nod to "The Jazz Singer," Krusty reveals to the Simpsons a painful secret: His father, Rabbi Krustofski, disowned him for choosing pies in the face over piety. Flashing back to kiddie Krusty's shtetl-like surroundings and early entertaining impulses would've been enough; but Bart and Lisa's attempt to crack the Rabbi's hardened heart with Talmudic teachings made it the most learned half hour of humor in history. For added authenticity, the role of Rabbi Krustofski was played by Jackie Mason, who could relate: Like Krusty, he came from a long line of rabbis, and like Krusty, he would rather be clowning

#7 MARGE VS. THE MONORAIL

Airdate: January 14, 1993

Turning from the Simpsons household to the town of Springfield, this episode skewers the loony underside of civic boosterism. Sooner or later, monorail mania grips every medium-size burg that yearns to join the big time, so when Springfield wins a multimillion-dollar settlement from corrupt nuclear-power mogul Mr. Burns, town residents entrust their jackpot to monorail huckster Lyle Lanley (Phil Hartman, at his oleaginous best). While everyone else joins in choruses of "The Monorail Song"—one of the show's classic original tunes—Marge

(left) frets and fights back. At the monorail's opening, Mayor Quimby says to honored guest Leonard Nimoy, "May the force be with you." Nimoy responds, "Do you even know who I am?" Says Quimby, "I think I do. Weren't you one of the Little Rascals?"

#8 22 SHORT FILMS ABOUT SPRINGFIELD

Airdate: April 14, 1996

Only the clever Simpsons writers could spoof an obscure art-house movie about an eccentric classical pianist—"Thirty-two Short Films About Glenn Gould"—and do so with hilarious results. Here we get a blizzard of quickie takes on life in Springfield, from shocking developments (Barney finally paying his bar tab) to charming domestic scenes (Marge trying to get gum out of Lisa's hair by using olive oil, lemon juice, tartar sauce, chocolate syrup, gravy, bacon fat, hummus, baba ghanouj, peanut butter and mayonnaise). Once, The Simpsons was primarily a show about a brat named Bart. In this episode the writers have brilliantly realized an entire community; the glimpses of Springfield life seen here demonstrate how layered the portrait has become.

#9 HOMER'S PHOBIA

Airdate: February 16, 1997

Never one to shy away from hot-button social issues, The Simpsons used irreverent wit to tackle one of the trickiest: homophobia. John Waters plays an openly gay, kitsch-loving shop owner (sample merchandise: an $8,500 TV GUIDE once owned by Jackie O.). John (above) hits it off with Homer, but their budding friendship wilts when Marge tells Homer the obvious: "He's 'festive.'... John is a ho-mo-sexual." From here it's all Archie Bunker-style logic: What if it's contagious? It takes John saving the lives of Homer, Bart, Moe and Barney for reluctant tolerance to prevail. "Maybe it's just the concussion talking, but any way you choose to live your life is OK with me," Homer says. It's a start.

#10 STARK RAVING DAD

Airdate: September 19, 1991

Sure, it's a blast to see Homer committed to a sanitarium for the "emotionally interesting," but it's Michael Jackson who pushes this episode over the edge. The singer plays an oafish, white inmate who thinks he's Michael Jackson. He talks like Jacko, sings like Jacko, moonwalks like Jacko. He and the unaware Homer make a bizarre duo, but it's Bart and Lisa who profit from their dad's new friendship. "Michael" helps Bart write a birthday song for his sister: "Happy birthday, Lisa, Lisa, it's your birthday..." A simple lowest") before greeting his new babysitter at the door in smoking jacket and pipe (bubble pipe, that is). But what she wants to tell him is that she has a boyfriend, and all Bart can feel is pain—and all he can think of is revenge. This flawless little gem about love and getting even is not only right-on in its depiction of a kid's first crush, it's just plain funny.

#12 DEEP SPACE HOMER

The Simpsons take on space in this out-of-this-world episode. Distressed over poor ratings for a recent mission ("We've been beaten by A Connie Chung Christmas!"), NASA bigwigs decide to beam Homer (left) beyond the stratosphere. Once in orbit, though, he breaks his own record for buffoonery; he sets a bag of chips and an army of ants loose to float in the shuttle's cabin. "Maybe I do have the right...what's that stuff?" Homer muses at one point. One thing is clear: The Simpsons writers do.

Putting words into the Simpsons' mouths is no easy task. Here, some of the show's alums recall their time in the trenchant trenches.

JEFF MARTIN, writer from 1990-92, executive producer of Men Behaving Badly. "I have a nice memory of being in a recording booth with [pitcher] Roger Clemens, telling him to cluck like a chicken. In the episode, a hypnotist is supposed to inspire him to play better but mistakenly convinces him he's a chicken. I was a big fan and happy to meet him. It was just an odd situation to be in."

CONAN O'BRIEN, writer from 1991-93, now star of Late Night With Conan O'Brien. "I was mostly appalled by the state of the furniture in the writing room. The couches looked like a college dorm, all beat up, and the springs were gone. Some writer had mashed a big blob of caramel chews onto the ceiling, and others had stuck stuff in it. No one ever bothered to take it down. It may still be there, it's probably now a historic landmark, there's probably a plaque on it."

JENNIFER CRITTENDEN, writer from 1994-96, now a writer for Seinfeld. "A lot of characters are drawn to look like the people on staff. I was watching a show last night, and I saw that one of the people waiting on line at the unemployment office looked like [writer] George Meyer. That probably pleases George, the people who know him and his mom!"
GREG DANIELS, writer from 1993-96, now cocreator and executive producer of King of the Hill. "I wrote an episode where Apu loses his job. I really wanted Michael Caine to be the person who ran the Kwik-E-Mart because it was a joke

JAY KOGEN, writer from 1989-93, now a supervising producer on Frasier. "We wanted to get Bruce Springsteen to do an episode. I went to the movies one night and happened to see him! I ran up to him. I'm a big guy, and all he sees is a maniac heading towards him. I try to convince him that I work on The Simpsons and that he should do the show. He thought I was a maniac. We never heard from him."

AL JEAN, writer from 1989, now cocreator of Teen Angel. "Mike [Reiss] and I were the first staff writers hired in 1989. Everyone we knew turned it down because it was a cartoon. We didn't have other offers so we said, 'We'll do it.'"

MIKE REISS, writer from 1989, now cocreator of Teen Angel. "If a celebrity has kids, they make him do the show. The scary one was when George Harrison of the Beatles did the show because his grandchildren wanted him to. That made us all feel really old." —Annabel Vered

HOME SWEET HOMER

One lucky Simpsons fan won a four-bedroom replica of Springfield's most colorful habitat. Here's a tour.

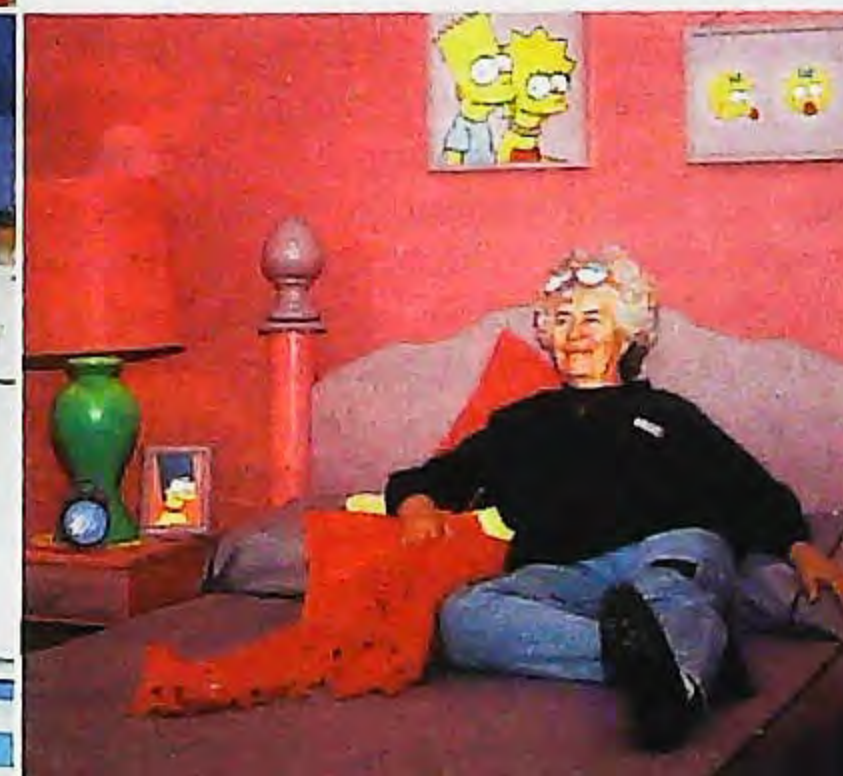

BY FRANK DECARO

Thirty-three thousand people have already traipsed through Barbara Howard's new house, but she still says there's no place like Homer's. The 63-year-old Kentucky great-grandmother won the top prize in a Simpsons House Giveaway last November—a life-size replica of the Simpsons' house worth about $100,000. Ever since, she and her extended family, all fans of the long-running series, have been woo-hooing it up. "I was so happy when they told me I won that I laughed and cried at the same time," Howard says. "I never won anything so big." Or so colorful.

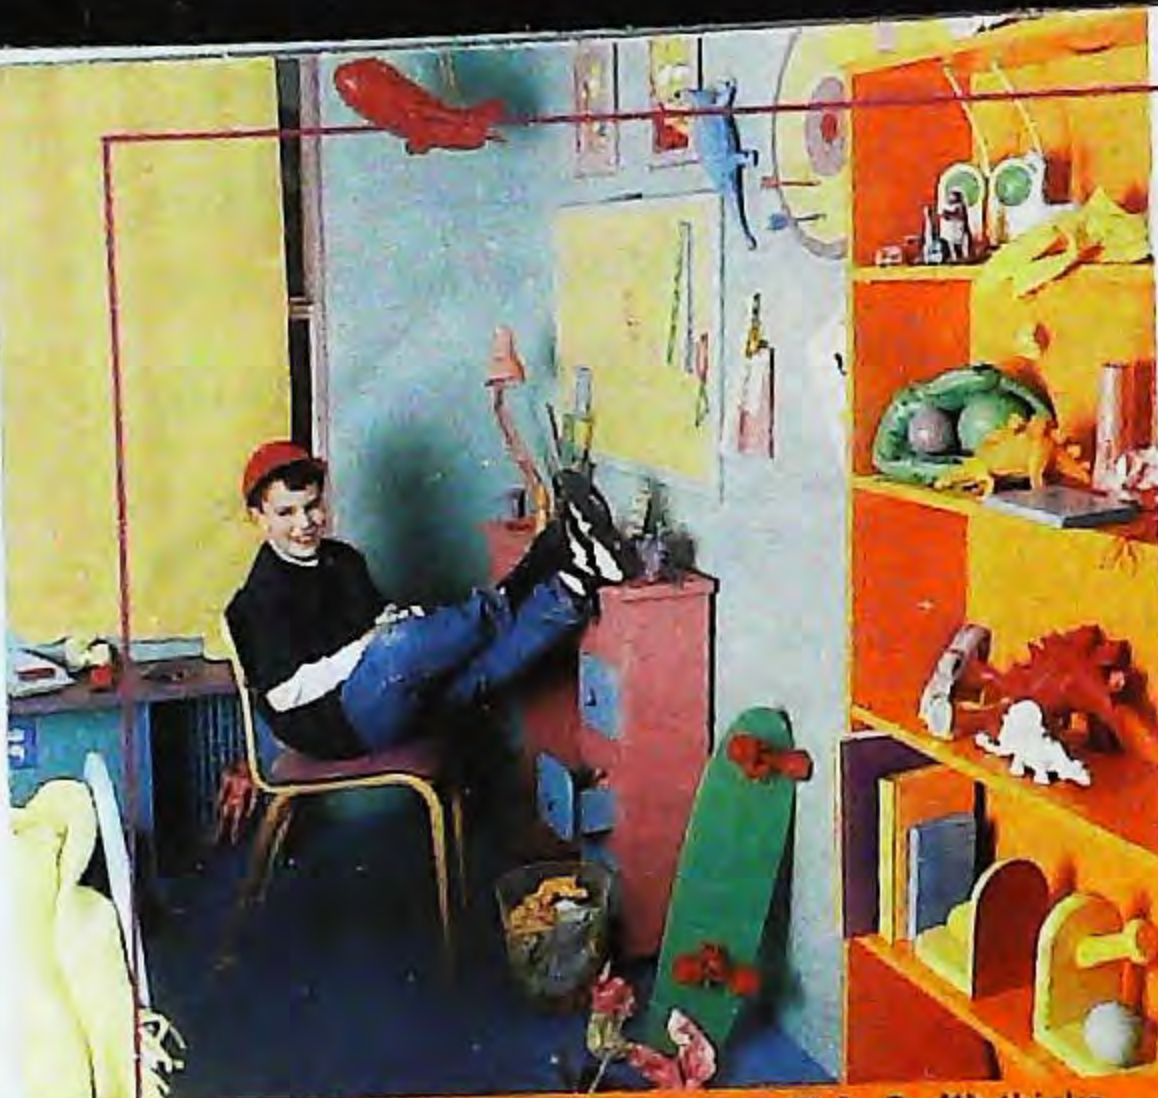

The four-bedroom house, located in Henderson, Nevada (just outside Las Vegas), nearly duplicates TV's favorite animated abode. Painted 25 different colors (including Power Orange and Generator Green), the home is decked out in Springfieldian splendor, right down to Marge's corncob kitchen curtains and Lisa's yellow saxophone. The attention to detail in the 2,200-square-foot cartoon house is astounding. There's an oil stain on the driveway, a mystery door under the stairs, even a mouse hole next to the couch in the living room. Only the Simpsons themselves are missing.

To get it so right, a design team watched tapes of 96 Simpsons episodes. "We really nailed that house," says Manny Gonzalez, chief architect on the project. "The only way we could top it is to build something out in space for The Jetsons."

The builders, the Kaufman and Broad Home Corporation, who sponsored the contest along with Fox and Pepsi, chose the outskirts of Las Vegas because the city already has the most cartoonish skyline on the planet. "They have a pyramid, an Empire State Building and pirate ships. Why not the Simpsons' house?" says Kaufman and Broad's Anna-Marie Hintgen. The company renamed the community of 156 homes Springfield in honor of the brightest house in the neighborhood. "We could have built it in California, but we wanted to do it in a place that was in line with the 'real' Springfield," says vice president of marketing and communications Jeff Charney.

Bart wannabe: Howard's grandson Elvin Smith thinks his grandmother should leave the house just as it is

Last summer, when the house was open to the public for 22 days over six weeks, it drew crowds of tourists from as far away as Belgium, not to mention curious locals who were willing to wait two to three hours in 100-degree heat for a 15-minute guided tour. "There was a group from Long Island. Everything was 'gaw-geous,'" remembers Victor Allen, who ran the tours on 20 of those days. Another visitor was a woman who had a roomful of Simpsons memorabilia back home. "She screamed in every room like she was being murdered," Allen says.

Although the house tours went off with only one minor mishap—a visitor took an empty can of Duff beer from the living room floor but felt so guilty he left it in a closet in Maggie's room upstairs—giving the house away had contest organizers rolling in Doh! After the winning number was announced during the show's season premiere, no one came forward with the matching game piece (from specially marked beverage packages). So, according to the contest rules, the house would be given away via a random drawing from the nonmatching game pieces that contestants sent in to win lesser prizes. (Fifteen million were submitted.) Did that go smoothly? No. When they called Howard, who had sent in just one game piece, to tell her she'd won the house, her farmer-electrician husband, J.B., hung up on them. "He thought it was a joke or something," she says, adding, "I call him Homer."

He shouldn't have been so surprised. His wife, a retired factory worker who lives on a farm 20 miles outside of Lexington, Kentucky, has won plenty before. "I've won a washer, diamond earrings, a go-cart, a deer rifle, a VCR, a camcorder, a microwave oven, a small TV," she says. "I don't really know why, but usually I've done something nice for someone just before. Like I bought groceries for somebody that needed them and won $1,000 that night from an instant ticket. About two weeks before I won the house, I said 'I've won everything but a house, a car, a motorcycle, a boat and a dryer.' I'm hoping the car is coming next."

Although her 13 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren want her to keep the house exactly as it is, Howard is not sure whether she'll move in and redecorate the place or sell it altogether. (One Simpsons fan reportedly offered Kaufman and Broad a half million dollars before the house was even finished.)

Whatever Howard decides to do inside, the outside is going to be painted beige to match the other homes in the development. "I would want to leave it just like it is, but the neighbors would probably throw rocks at me," she says.

Maybe not. "It doesn't bother me if it stays like that," says her Springfield neighbor Sharyl Stavers. "I think it's kind of neat, but then I don't live right next door." Of course not. Flanders does. ■

For a dink town in the middle of who knows where, Springfield sure has hosted its share of Hollywood hotshots. The Simpsons has been a desirable pit stop for witty glitterati since its debut as a half hour sitcom in 1990, and it's still considered the place to showcase one's sparkling sense of humor. As a look in The Simpsons: A Complete Guide to Our Favorite Family (HarperPerennial), edited by Ray Richmond and Antonia Coffman, reminded us, Winona Ryder has appeared as Allison, Lisa's classroom nemesis; Danny DeVito dropped by as Homer's long-lost millionaire half-brother, Herb; even Meryl Streep strode in to play Reverend Lovejoy's devilish daughter, Jessica. But as any starstruck Springfielder knows, it's even more fun when celebs pop in as themselves. Below are some of the VIPs who didn't go incognito.

When I called two friends, both New York City homicide detectives first grade with more than 50 years of murder investigations between them, to report that I was interviewing one of the stars of NBC's critically acclaimed policier, Homicide: Life on the Street, their unanimous reaction blew me away.

"The best cop show on the tube, I never miss it," Det. Louis Scarcella raved—before I could even ask him if he was a regular viewer. "Whoever makes that show, they have the squad room down cold. It's closer to what we do than any other cop show on television."

Added Det. Steve Chmil: "All the nuances—the pit, the fishbowl, the clearance chart, the boss who backs up his guys, the ho-hum ground-ball murders versus the high-priority media-intense cases you gotta solve yesterday—it fits our life to a tee."

Moreover, when I informed Scarcella and Chmil that I would be meeting Richard Belzer, who portrays Det. John Munch, these two hardened cops nearly leapt through the telephone wires.

"Whoa! Oh, man! Munch the oddball," wailed Scarcella. "He's a whackadoo, brainy and funny, and every squad has one."

"Munch the biter and moaner?" echoed Chmil. "I mean, here's a guy who's always playing an angle. Always wants out. Get into the drywall business with his brother-in-law. Open a bar. But like a lot of guys I've worked with, no matter how much they complain, they always stick around long enough on the job to get it done."

Now, on this November night, I relate these comments to Belzer while we dine in a trendy Manhattan restaurant with his stunning wife, actress Harlee McBride (who has a recurring role on Homicide as an assistant medical examiner). The man who burst onto the comedy scene in the 1970s performing outrageously subversive stand-up creases his face into Munch's trademark sardonic grin cum leer. "What precinct did you say these guys were from?" Belzer asks. "Can I send them some flowers or something? Candy? A shiny new police siren?"

Typical. During its six often tumultuous seasons, the gritty ensemble-driven Homicide (Fridays, 10 P.M./ET) has been lauded by TV critics as the thinking man's cop show, where a gun is rarely drawn and car chases are as scarce as 100 percent clearance rates. In the middle of this universe is Munch, "the guy who always feels that the world is a godforsaken, screwed-up place, and the other characters revolve around him like planets," says executive producer Tom Fontana.

Furthermore, the erudite Belzer imbues his cynical, thrice-divorced character with a literary combination of Edgar Allan Poe's delight in the macabre and Graham Greene's insouciance toward untimely death. ("Murder didn't mean much to Raven. It was just a new job," begins Greene's novel A Gun for Sale.)

"I've always loved anything written well—novels, plays, movies, anything—and it's the writers on Homicide who've been able to incorporate a lot of my personal idiosyncrasies into the character of John Munch," the 53-year-old Belzer says to explain his unlikely transformation from loopy stand-up comedian—his signature routine was an imitation of Mick Jagger as a rooster on acid—to Baltimore homicide detective. (Munch even turned up recently on Fox's X-Files.) "Munch is very close to how I would be as a cop. He's a dissident politically. He doesn't trust authority. He doesn't trust the state. He doesn't trust the FBI. He doesn't trust the government. He doesn't even trust his bosses in the police department."

Belzer catches himself, smiles. "Sure, John Munch is a little paranoid. But in a healthy way."

Like, well, Richard Belzer, an unreconstructed political radical who grew up in Bridgeport, Connecticut, and bounced from jobs as a reporter to teacher to dockworker to jewelry salesman before discovering that the quick wit he employed to deflect high school bullies could earn him a living. "Like me, Munch is a class clown," Belzer admits. "Only now, murder is the subject."

Belzer broke into show business with a starring role in the 1974 cult classic "The Groove Tube," a film satire aimed at (ironic drumroll, please) television, before joining the then unknown Bill Murray, Gilda Radner, and John Belushi in the long-running Off-Broadway hit, "The National Lampoon Show." Afterward, between stand-up stints, he was also half of WNBC radio's New York City morning drive-time show "Brink and Belzer." "The funny half," he adds, picking at his pasta. "I have a face made for radio."

Indeed, with his, shall we say, distinctive look—one female viewer calls him "handsome in the way Humphrey Bogart was handsome, which means he's not handsome but sexy"—Belzer was about the last person NBC executives expected to fill the role of Munch.

Tonight, clad in a dark suit and black silk shirt to match his copious head of straight, feathered hair, the lean, 6-foot-2 Belzer admits with a laugh, "Munch was the last character cast, and the network suits were looking for a Jason Priestley type to take the part."

"You mean you're not that type?" interjects McBride. "You've been lying to me all this time?"

Belzer shoots her the grin. "Damn. It's amazing how reporters trick you into giving up trade secrets."

Seriously, confirms Fontana, "There was network pressure on us to make Munch the show's hunk." But once Belzer read for the part, Fontana adds, he and executive producer Barry Levinson "knew that Richard's outré take on life was just what we wanted to inform the character."

Last season, Fontana and Levinson even took a page from Belzer's childhood to form the theme of an episode titled "Kaddish." In it, after Munch's high school inamorata is murdered, Little Johnny's boyhood geekdom is explored in a series of flashbacks. "In some ways that was me," Belzer says. "The guy who constantly had crushes on the pretty girls who would never go out with him."

For the past several years, when not filming episodes of Homicide, a substantial part of Belzer's outré take on life has involved "lazing around" the cottage he shares with McBride and her two grown daughters, Jessica and Bree, in the small town of Bozouls, in the southwest of France. "You know," Belzer says, "just reading in the garden, going into the village for bread, working the antique walnut press we have on the property."

"Pardon me?" McBride interrupts.

"Well, it's Harlee who really knows how to work the press to get walnut oil out of it," Belzer backtracks sheepishly. "But I do do a lot of the going into the village for bread."

In fact, says Belzer (who lives in a Baltimore apartment with McBride and is considering purchasing a pied-à-terre in Manhattan), when other TV stars begin flocking to squeeze feature film work into their summer breaks, "I can't wait to get on a plane and head for France and just kick back. Sometimes I just feel like I need a break from the in-your-face hype and marketing of everything from politics to peanut butter in the United States."

And now as we dig into dessert, he tells me that doing Homicide, as well as crossover roles on both Law & Order (NBC) and The X-Files, has changed his life in one specific manner. He has, he says, "become hooked on noir." In fact, when the inevitable occurs and Homicide—which consistently finishes third in the Friday night ratings behind ABC's dominant 20/20 and CBS's Nash Bridges—has run its course, Belzer says he would be "very interested in doing another series. And there's been interest from some other people as well. There's even talk of spinning Munch off or doing a character similar to Munch. I'd like to stay in the detective genre, maybe as a streetwise private detective. The world of noir. Kind of existential, Raymond Chandler kind of stuff. Only funny."

The mind reels. Would they call it Sartre, Witty P.I.?

"But I'll never stop doing stand-up," adds Belzer, who hosted Comedy Central's year-end installment of Town Hall and whose HBO special last spring, Another Lone Nut, captured his take on life. "There'll never be anything like a live audience. That kind of juice you can't get anywhere else."

Unless, of course, it comes from a couple of real-life New York City cops. Thus, as we exit the restaurant, I tell Belzer that in the humble opinions of Dets. First Class Louis Scarcella and Steve Chmil of the NYPD, Homicide is the second-best police show ever to have appeared on TV.

Belzer stops short. "Yeah? What's their all-time favorite?"

"Naked City."

"Hmm...second all-time to Naked City?" he muses. "OK, I'll take that."

Which only proves that Richard Belzer is mellowing. Detective Munch would definitely figure it for a conspiracy.

STARSHIP VEGAS

Star Trek arrives at the final frontier—Las Vegas—with the opening of an elaborate
theme complex

By MICHAEL LOGAN

For more than 30 years, the incorrigible Klingons have created havoc in the distant galaxies of Star Trek. Now they're preparing to pillage the land of sin, slots and showgirls.

Star Trek: The Experience—opening January 4 at the Las Vegas Hilton in Las Vegas—is a $70 million, 65,000-square-foot interactive adventure in which ticket buyers will be “kidnapped” by the bellicose alien race and transported to the 24th century where they are rescued by the crew of the Enterprise. In addition to a state-of-the-art motion simulator ride that will make guests feel like they're flying in a Starfleet shuttle craft, the Experience also includes a History of the Future museum, a themed restaurant and lounge, and a full-scale recreation of the shopping promenade from Star Trek: Deep Space Nine. Adjacent to the attraction is the SpaceQuest Casino, where a powerful tractor beam will extract cash from visitors' wallets.

“Until now, the Star Trek of the TV and motion picture screens has been a 2-D experience. This will blow away the proscenium and become as real as it gets,” promises Rick Berman, executive producer of DS9 and Star Trek: Voyager and senior creative consultant for the attraction. He's not sweating this big Vegas gamble. “We've been working on this project for three years—twice as long as it takes us to make a Star Trek feature—but I think the payoff will be worth it. People will be buying bus tickets to Vegas who never before dreamed of going there.” And it's because the Experience will draw hardcore, trivia-savvy Trekkers (and presumably a good-size chunk of the 32 million who already visit Las Vegas annually) that the somewhat-troubled project—originally scheduled to open last July 4 but postponed because of technical problems—has been painstakingly researched and presented.

Berman, who has overseen all Trek projects since the death of franchise creator Gene Roddenberry, says he was unhappy with the original concept of the attraction as envisioned by Paramount Parks, the theme-park division of Star Trek's parent company, Viacom. He convinced the firm to start over with two of his Trek experts, Rene Echevarria, the Peabody-nominated writer and producer on DS9, and Ken Biller, a writer and producer of Voyager. “Our first assignment,” says Echevarria, “was to go ride every high-tech theme-park attraction that's around—from Back to the Future and the E.T. Adventure at Universal Studios to Star Tours and the Indiana Jones Adventure at Disneyland—and find out how we could make ours different.”

Their ideas were implemented by the Landmark Entertainment Group, which has turned several major film properties into hit theme-park attractions, among them Jurassic Park—The Ride, Terminator 2: 3-D and Kongfrontation as well as the Ghostbusters Spooktacular at the Universal Studios parks in Los Angeles and Orlando.

“Our goal with Star Trek: The Experience is to top ourselves and everybody else in the business,” says Landmark CEO Gary Goddard. “When it comes down to it, Jurassic is really a boat ride, Kong a tram ride, and Terminator and Ghostbusters are theater experiences. But Trek takes all the existing technologies as well as a company of live actors and puts them together in a massive environmental atmosphere unlike anything ever attempted.”

The voyage portion of the Experience, which lasts 22 minutes and accommodates 1,000 people per hour, begins when guests suddenly find themselves “beamed” to the Transporter Room of the U.S.S. Enterprise D (the ship that was seen throughout Star Trek: The Next Generation and crashed in the film “Star Trek Generations”). After being briefed on the bridge, the recruits take a Turbolift 30 decks to the Grand Corridor (never

ON THE HORIZON

Reports of the impending death of the Star Trek phenomenon are unfounded, according to Rick Berman. "This season, ratings are up on both Deep Space Nine and Voyager," says the executive producer of both series. "That marks the first time they've been higher than the year before." The ninth Trek film—to be directed by Jonathan Frakes—is now in preproduction, with all stars of The Next Generation on board (Patrick Stewart, left, is pocketing $12 million in a package deal with Paramount that will give him first crack at several non-Trek scripts). Due in theaters next November, the as-yet-untitled film has been reported by Variety to be based on the classic Joseph Conrad novel Heart of Darkness (as was Francis Ford Coppola's "Apocalypse Now"). "But that is greatly exaggerated," Berman insists. "There were similarities to Heart in earlier drafts, but now there is no more than a suggestion." While Berman does admit there are elements of "Lost Horizon" in the new film, he says he's "doing everything but taking retinal thumbprints to keep the script out of the wrong hands." Secrecy also envelops Berman's $10 million, 40-minute Trek film to be produced in IMAX 3-D. "The first draft will be ready in January and involves both familiar and newly created Trek characters." The projected premiere date? "Well, it'll be this millennium," Berman says with a laugh. "But that depends on whether you think the millennium ends in 1999 or 2000." —M.L.

seen on TV) and ultimately board a shuttle craft for a battle with the Klingons.

"The flight itself—in which you are almost fully enwrapped above, below and on all sides by a 70-millimeter film—uses a six-axis motion simulator," says Berman. "The effect of warp speed and being in battle is extremely realistic and, occasionally, even terrifying." Cracks Echevarria: "We're hoping to win this year's Dramamine Award." But Echevarria adds that the attraction, which culminates back on Earth with a dogfight over the Las Vegas Strip, "has some very graceful moments of calm. At one point you encounter various space wildlife, and it's truly beautiful. Too many of today's rides are shrill and relentless."

Next Generation favorites Jonathan Frakes (Comdr. Will Riker) and LeVar Burton (Lt. Comdr. Geordi LaForge) play important roles in the film portion of the attraction. But Patrick Stewart (Capt. Jean-Luc Picard), who is featured in voice-over only, could not be convinced to participate in the project more extensively. "That kept us from using other stars from TNG as we'd originally wanted," says Echevarria. "If we had everybody but Patrick, his absence would have been too noticeable."

Still, Trekkers should have plenty to excite them before and after their spin in space. "The museum has over 200 costumes, weapons, miniatures, props and masks from the series and movies," says Goddard. And fans are best advised to carry sacks of latinum (Ferengi currency): Shops such as Zek's Grand Emporium, Garak's Clothiers and Moogie's Trading Post will peddle everything from pens and pins to $2,000 leather Trek jackets to a $12,000 Klingon uniform. The 20,000-square-foot casino—designed by renowned futurist Syd Mead—simulates a space station orbiting Earth. Crapshooters will see space taxis and delivery ships whizzing by the portals.

Quark's Bar and Restaurant will use futuristic plates and flatware (including curved Klingon-warrior steak knives) to serve guests. "And unlike every other theme park I've ever been to," says Berman, "our food is actually excellent." Well, let's leave that to the restaurant critics, shall we? Among the more, er, unusual items on the menu are Hant-Borgers, the Wrap of Khan, Tribble Tenders and those intergalactic delicacies Frozen Gagh and Glop on a Stick. ■

But already the show is recalled as "rudimentary" by MTV senior VP Matt Farber as he heralds its successor: the Live Link. Using new technology from Intel, the Live Link affords MTV Live viewers greater interaction with MTV VJs (like Carson Daly, pictured) and guests.

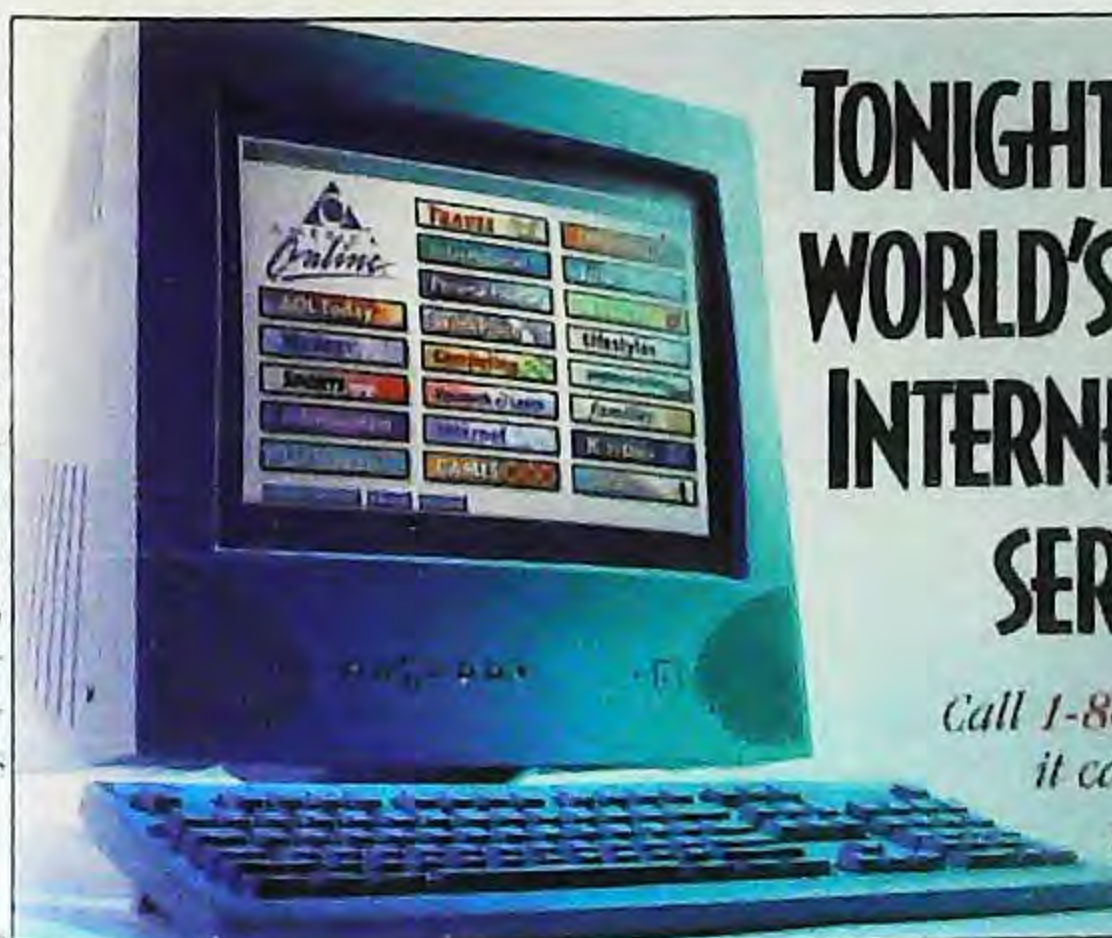

Farber says the Live Link could give viewers a chance to play a video game with stars backstage during MTV Live as the game image goes out over the air. The coolest new wrinkle? Video postcards, e-mails that amount to videophone messages. "We could be talking about the new Janet Jackson album," suggests Farber. "Someone at home in Omaha could comment on it in a video postcard that would go live on the air." Just wait until the Loveline producers get a load of this. —Greg Fagan

1997: THE WORST IN SOAPS

Last week, the bouquets, this week, the brickbats: What can be said about a year that started out with CBS, ABC and NBC all claiming to be No. 1 with daytime viewers? It's true! CBS goes by households ratings, where it easily beats the other two networks.

Lucci's kidnap plot was a baby bomb

But ABC and NBC—which tied for No. 1 among young women, the only group advertisers truly care about—prefer to go by demographics. That way, everybody wins. (Is this a great country or what?) Of course, what nobody wants to admit is that just one soap—CBS's Guiding Light—actually gained viewers during 1997. Everyone else lost big time. Why? The powers that be—in full denial mode—gave countless interviews blaming the erosion of the soap audience on changing lifestyles and increased competition from cable (yeah, right—like when was the last time you met someone who gave up Days of Our Lives for CNN?). But the primary reason fans are tuning out can be summed up in three words the "suits" never utter: The writing sucks.

We can only begin to list the stink-bomb plots of '97: Molly's reign of terror on As the World Turns; the Miranda mess on General Hospital; the Irish terrorism on One Life to Live; Victor's marriage to Diane on The Young and the Restless; the rain-forest adventure on Days; and Another World's shameless effort to mimic Days with the premature burial of Rachel and a story about an enchanted tiki god who makes everyone horny. These aren't mere misfires but creative decisions so misguided, inane and unviewable that they can drive the most die-hard fan from the tube for days, weeks and even months at a time.

Inconsistency has become a huge problem. Due to the astonishing incompetence of head writers Richard Culliton, Chris Whitesell and Janet Iacobuzio, GH went from being the best soap of '96 to almost the worst of '97. Maverick Days scribe James E. Reilly—who has left to create his own soap—had us on the edge of our seats for most of the year, yet his last few weeks had us reaching for the No-Doz (and, frankly, we smell sabotage). And what can be said about All My Children's decision to destroy the popular Erica Kane character by having her kidnap Edmund and Maria's baby—easily the worst plot of this or any other year. Though stunningly acted by Susan Lucci, this outta-nowhere story was unbearably heartless, offensive and depressing. And it was made even worse by its silly denouement: Erica is now in jail where she is always glamorously coiffed, perfectly manicured, bedecked in designer outfits, and bringing new meaning to the term model prisoner. Puh-leeze. We don't think all these writers are trying to insult our intelligence. It's worse than that: They're writing for an audience they don't think has any intelligence to insult. May '98 bring us sanity.

SPORTSVIEW

BY PHIL MUSHNICK

SHOE'S IN CHARGE?

My fondest wish for 1998—a pipe dream, really—is that control of America's sports is wrested from the greedy hands of the half dozen athletic-shoe companies that have successfully sought ownership of the hearts and minds of America's best athletes and athletic programs. Ballplayers now serve not as representatives of their teams or even their sports but as employees of sneaker companies.

Last year, when the Mariners announced Ken Griffey Jr.'s four-year, $34 million deal—making him baseball's highest-paid player—Griffey showed his gratitude to his team and his sport by wearing a Nike hat. The Mariners had to shove a team cap in front of the lectern to show their involvement.

It's not just ballplayers, either. Cowboys owner Jerry Jones struts around with a Nike swoosh in his lapel. George Steinbrenner doesn't leave home without his Adidas pin.

And as the year ended with the latest in a series of disturbing episodes—the Latrell Sprewell story—there, lurking close to the surface, was a sneaker company. Within days of Sprewell's assaults on Golden State Warriors coach P.J. Carlesimo, Converse dumped Sprewell from his endorsement deal. A spokesman said Converse had no choice because Sprewell's behavior had been "inexcusable and unsportsmanlike."

But if inexcusable and unsportsmanlike conduct is what it took for Converse to fire Sprewell, that hardly explains why, last season, Converse won a bidding war for the services of a gentleman by the name of Dennis Rodman.

That Rodman had been suspended countless times for undermining his teams and his coaches meant nothing. That he had been suspended for head-butting an NBA ref could not dampen Converse's enthusiasm nor could his suspension for kicking a photographer. Finally, that Rodman was fined $50,000 by the NBA for a bigoted spew against Mormons could not discourage Converse from launching a national TV ad campaign celebrating Rodman for his defiant and remorseless antisocial behavior.

Out of step: Sprewell loses his sneaker deal

While—as Converse's ads remind us—Rodman can sell sneakers as well when suspended as when playing, Sprewell can only sell sneakers if seen wearing them in an NBA game. And the NBA determined that Sprewell should take the rest of the season off.

The week after Converse dismissed Sprewell, he appeared with agents Arn Tellem and Johnnie Cochran Jr. Tellem and Cochran denounced the NBA and the Warriors for firing Sprewell without due process, yet neither mentioned Converse for doing the same. Then again, no agent worth his cut of a multi-million dollar deal would mess with a sneaker company. They have other clients to consider.

THE ROBINS REPORT

By J. MAX ROBINS

ABC News Buys Time with Century Project

Executives go on the defensive when pushed about the problems at the once dominant network

The December 17 press conference was ostensibly called to discuss The Century, a six-part ABC News series chronicling the last 100 years. Yet, besides hyping a project that won't debut until 1999, other agendas were on the table. In part, the recent press powwow at ABC's New York headquarters, hosted by ABC News president David Westin, division chairman Boone Arledge and anchor Peter Jennings, was Westin's coming-out party. Although Westin was named to his post last March, he has been widely viewed as Arledge's junior partner. Apparently to shore up his image, a well-prepped Westin took the podium to run the conference. The message? That if he isn't exactly in charge, he and Arledge are equals. "We even finish each other's sentences," said Westin. "I can't really think of a major issue or area where we've disagreed," chimed in Arledge.

When pushed about the myriad problems plaguing ABC News, a defensive Westin chided the press for being too preoccupied with the internal politics rather than the quality of the programming. Still, it is hard to dispute that World News Tonight and Good Morning America are on a downward ratings spiral. Additionally, a stream of talent has left the division, including new CNN president Rick Kaplan, who has lured away Jeff Greenfield and Judd Rose, among others. Meanwhile, as reported here last week, GMA co-host Charlie Gibson has been considering a lucrative offer to become the host of A&E's Biography series.

Attempts by ABC News brass to put a positive spin on recent events are understandable. Just two weeks earlier, there had been a contentious meeting with the ABC affiliate board of governors in Los Angeles during which an unfocused Arledge had been critical of Jennings's news judgment. Those in attendance at that earlier assemblage said there seemed to be no blueprint in place to right the troubles at GMA or World News Tonight. Concerned station executives complained to ABC Inc. president Robert Iger. Iger pleaded for patience and indicated that Westin would soon be in charge and Arledge would be moving into an emeritus role, but he could not give a date for that eventuality.

At the December press conference, Arledge was asked if he would be running ABC News when the Century project debuts. "How do I know?" he answered. "I might be a golf pro by then." As for correcting the problems in the news division, Arledge said that GMA news reader Kevin Newman had replaced designated fill-in host Tom Bergeron as the front-runner to succeed Gibson. Both Arledge and Jennings downplayed any reports of a rift.

The day after the press conference, Jennings reflected on the current state of ABC News. "Change, whether it's management or anchors, is always difficult," said Jennings. "Just a couple of years ago, NBC News had its shake-ups, and everybody said it was over for them. I remember the fiasco at CBS with Dan Rather and Connie Chung, and everybody said it was over for them. Well they're doing quite nicely now. I think there's a lesson in that for all of us."

Bond fans target Siskel

At last I can agree with Gene Siskel on an issue: James Bond and the men who try to be 007 ["Of Human 'Bond'-age: Acting in Sean's Shadow," December 6]. Many will agree that Sean Connery was the one and only Bond. The torch has been passed, but his shoes have not been filled. However, I do disagree with Siskel's choice of Denzel Washington as the successor to Connery. Although everything he does is excellent, there is a certain gentleness about Denzel. There is a man with the same appeal as Connery—Highlander's Adrian Paul. He resembles Connery, sounds like him, and has the same style and sex appeal.

Kay L. Knox
Columbus, Ohio

Mr. Siskel made it clear that he believes Sean Connery was the best Bond and his successors were lightweights. In rebuttal, not only did Roger Moore have a strong following, but the current 007, Pierce Brosnan, does as well. As actor Desmond Llewelyn (who portrays Q in the Bond films) has said, "There's no doubt about it. Your favorite Bond is the one you saw first. But they're all highly competent, extremely good actors."

Roy Reynolds
Ashland, Ky.

Gene Siskel is Double-0 wrong! The best Bond film by far is "You Only Live Twice." It had Connery at his most suave and sophisticated. It also had the best screenplay (by Roald Dahl), the best cinematography, the best title song (sung by Nancy Sinatra), the best evil seductress (Karin Dor as Agent No. 11, Helga Brandt) and the best Bond gadget (the "little Nellie," a fully armed

Brief Reviews of This Week's Notable Programs

BY RAY STACKHOUSE

SAVION GLOVER'S NU YORK (Sat., ABC) 6E The tap-happy star of Broadway's "Bring in 'Da Noise, Bring in 'Da Funk" fails to bring down da house. Roaming around the Big Apple, the dance master works his pneumatic steps to the pop, gospel, hip-hop and R&B tunes of guest stars Stevie Wonder, Kirk Franklin, Sean "Puffy" Combs and SWV. But the music seems out of sync with Glover's flashy footwork, and the concept doesn't click. My score (0-10): 4

THE MAGNIFICENT SEVEN (Sat., CBS) 12V Michael Biehn, ringleader of the title posse of mismatched gunslingers, does a fine Clint Eastwood in the debut of this new series. Quick on the draw and slow on the drawl, he's a master of the hooded-eye glower and the clenched-teeth threat. And he stands tall even with two hours' worth of western-movie clichés ricocheting around him. Despite the dearth of originality, there's a wealth of action and heart, with a dollop of humor thrown in. My score: an-OK-but-less-than-magnificent 6

BLACKOUT EFFECT (Sun., NBC) 6E When two planes collide in midair, a National Transportation Safety Board official (the sturdy Eric Stoltz) tries to find out why. The first leg of this well-acted TV-movie, about his initial investigation, is gripping. Unfortunately, the plot gets rerouted to Conspiracyville, where powerful higher-ups hang the blame on an authority-questioning Tweeb of a ground controller (Charles Martin Smith). Many of the covert machinations are hard to believe; some downright impossible. My score: 5

LA FEMME NIKITA (Sun., USA) 12V Complex plotting, steamy romance and some edgy, provocative surprises spark the second-season opener. In October's cliffhanging finale, the feisty operative Nikita (the beguiling Peta Wilson) escaped from the Section.

Now she's trying to make her way back into the fold with help from an unlikely source—whose plan brings a disturbing resonance to the phrase "you always hurt the one you love." My score: 8

Peta Wilson in
La Femme Nikita

MASTERPIECE THEATRE (Sun.-Tues., PBS) 6A English actor Martin Shaw (who's a dead ringer for the middle-aged Gregory Peck) distinguishes himself as Cecil John Rhodes in this sprawling six-hour biography. The 19th-century British empire-builder founded Rhodesia and made De Beers the diamond company. He also ignited the Boer War and, according to Masterpiece Theatre host Russell Baker, "laid the foundation for apartheid." "Rhodes" recounts a story of "egotism and monstrous greed hiding behind a thin mask of patriotism." This intriguing miniseries plays like a B-western, South African style. Instead of cattle and sheep, the range war is over diamonds and gold. My score: 6

She will return to Hits & Misses next week.

A CLASSIC REVISITED

Michael Biehn

Debut: A six-part series based on the 1960 Yul Brynner-Steve McQueen Western, which was itself based on Akira Kurosawa's 1954 classic "The Seven Samurai."

In the spirited opener, a Seminole elder seeks help when his village is overrun by ex-Confederates. What he finds is a gunfighter (Michael Biehn) for hire who enlists six others—a preacher, con man, rogue, thrill-seeker, drifter and former slave—to match wits (and bullets) with a renegade officer named Anderson (played in fine fiendish style by Kurtwood Smith). Other regulars: Ron Perlman, Anthony Starke, Dale Midkiff, Andrew Kavovit, Eric Close and Rick Worth. (2:00)

Jabba the Hutt

The revamped version of George Lucas's monumental 1977 science-fiction blockbuster.

To mark the film's 20th anniversary last year, Lucas not only restored the original print but enhanced many of the existing visual and audio effects. He also added some stunning new scenes, among them the embellished footage of the Mos Eisley spaceport. In another reinstated segment, Han Solo (Harrison Ford) promises to repay Jabba the Hutt for his lost booty. Since the theatrical re-release, "Star Wars" has gone on to become the highest-grossing film ever in the U.S., and the fourth worldwide. Luke: Mark Hamill. Obi-Wan: Alec Guinness. (2:05)

Boxleitner, Furlan

Stunning special effects and a riveting story highlight this prequel to the science-fiction saga.

The 1998 cable film—which launches the series' run of new episodes on TNT—tells the history of the Earth-Minbari war, which began in the year 2243, a decade before the creation of the Babylon 5 space station. This clash proved to be the defining event of the "Third Age." It made Sheridan (Bruce Boxleitner) a hero and put the pre-transformed Delenn (Mira Furlan) in line to be the leader of her race. The war also determined the destinies of Londo and G'Kar, the B-5 ambassadors who, throughout the series, have gone from bitter enemies to trusted allies. (2:00)

KIDS' SERIES
Shari Lewis,
Charlie Horse

Debut: In this sequel of sorts to her Lamb Chop's Play-along! Shari Lewis begins an outstanding new weekday series aimed at introducing youngsters aged 3 to 8 to the joys of music. What could have been called "Charlie Horse's Sing-along!" features Shari and her noteworthy band of fluffy cohorts—Charlie Horse, Lamb Chop and Hush Puppy—serving up pizza dough and do-re-mis at a beachfront restaurant. Also on staff are Cookie the chef (Dom DeLuise), assistant manager Junior (Wezley Morris) and a full-size, costumed orangutan named Takeout (Chancz Perry), who helps out around the store. Rounding out the cast is a rascally raccoon called Fingers.

KELLEY'S HEROES AND HEROINES

David E. Kelley

David E. Kelley's two series set in Boston law firms go back to back. "I've always toyed with the idea of having my shows on the same night," says Kelley. "I don't know how it will bear out since they're on different networks, but it's exciting." The pairing is a result of The Practice moving from Saturdays, where it garnered plenty of praise but had a hard time cultivating an audience. Though they have similar settings, the series and their leads—the quirky Ally (Calista Flockhart) and the intense Bobby (Dylan McDermott)—couldn't be more different. That's the way Kelley likes it. "The fact that they don't resemble each other—that's the fun in [writing] them," he says. And in watching them. (1:00)

MIXING IT UP

Jean Smart,
Nancy McKeon

Debut: Jean Smart (Designing Women) stars in this sitcom as a multimedia lifestyle expert... think a ditzier version of Martha Stewart.

On the surface, the well-meaning, eccentric Chelsea Stevens has it all, including a hit home show and a top-selling magazine. But her perfectionism often alienates those around her—like her ex-husband, who left Chelsea for a supermarket cashier. In the series opener, Chelsea discovers that her new office manager, Jane Sokol (Nancy McKeon), is also recovering from a breakup, and she decides to lend a helping hand. Mr. John. Joseph Maher. Trudy: Linda Kash. Terry: Heath Hyche.

IN HARM'S WAY?

David James Elliott,
Daphne Ashbrook

This military-legal drama has shown a gain in ratings since moving from NBC to CBS a year ago, and one reason may be an increased emphasis on character development as opposed to good-guys vs. bad-guys plots. "The die-hard fans like the more personal stories," says executive producer Don Bellisario; they're "the glue that keeps the whole show together." In this episode, things get romantic between Harm (David James Elliott) and his best friend's widow, Annie (Daphne Ashbrook), after her son (Will Rothhaar) witnesses a murder. The story also peels away some of the gruff exterior of Harm's boss, Adm. Chegwidden (John M. Jackson). Mac: Catherine Bell. (1:00)

DEAD BLUE: SURVIVING DEPRESSION

Mike Wallace

A clinically depressed brain appears blue when viewed on a scanning machine, so in a manner of speaking, people suffering from depression really do have a case of the blues. But the message of this compelling report offers hope to sufferers: depression is survivable.

So say CBS newsmen Mike Wallace, psychologist Martha Manning and Pulitzer-winning author William Styron, people of considerable accomplishment who, along with their loved ones, speak eloquently about feelings of worthlessness and hopelessness. ("Depression will sink you if you let it," says Manning.) The good news: all three talk about these feelings in the past tense. (1:00)

TV GUIDE'S MOVIE RATINGS

Theatrical movies are indicated in the daily listings by the symbol M plus a rating of ★★★★ (excellent), ★★★ (good), ★★ (fair) or ★ (poor). Our evaluations are based on a number of factors, including a consensus of leading critics, quality of cast and director, awards earned and box-office performance. Movies may be edited for television, our ratings are based on the original, complete film. An M without stars indicates an unrated theatrical movie. TV GUIDE does not evaluate a movie if the criteria can't be applied because too few facts are known (example: a minor foreign film); or if the film is made-for-television (indicated with MPT) or direct-to-video (MDV).

UNDER THE INFLUENCE

A drunk driver who mows down three people faces capital murder charges in a highly emotional case in which Ross battles McCoy's plan to bend the rules to get a guilty verdict. Not only does McCoy refuse to tell the defense attorney (David Garrison) that the presiding judge (Cliff Gorman) has especially strong feelings against DWI offenders, he also suggests that a foreign-born witness stay out of the country to ensure conviction. All of which bolsters Ross's convictions: she tells McCoy in one of their most heated exchanges that "It looks like you and [the judge] are tag-teaming to commit legal murder." Ross: Carey Lowell. Dressler: Daniel McDonald. (1:00)

U.S. CHAMPIONSHIPS

Tonight's men's long programs in Philadelphia determine the two U.S. representatives for the Nagano Winter Games. Commentator and 1988 Olympic gold medalist Brian Boitano believes there's a big talent gap between defending champ Todd Eldredge and his rivals. "Todd has a lot of leeway for mistakes. If he were to lose, it would definitely be an upset." Boitano thinks the other spot on the men's squad could go to Michael Weiss ("He pushes himself and he's definitely one to watch.") or former U.S. champ Scott Davis. ("He's been skating very well and could be an upset choice.") (Live)

NEW UNIT, OLD ENEMY

Return: The police drama's fourth season opens with a hard-hitting episode in which Williams and Moreno (Malik Yoba, Lauren Velez) are assigned to a special unit.

It's been six months since Eddie Torres' murder, which left Williams without a partner and Moreno a widow, and they're curious about why they're being transferred. Their new lieutenant (Tommy Ford) explains they'll be working a multimillion-dollar robbery case and their "personal interest... may be useful." It seems that one of the crooks is Jordan (Dana Eskelson), the woman who killed Eddie.

...TO BILL COSBY
Cosby,
Aaron Chien

Debut: Hoping to build on the success of two recent specials, Bill Cosby hosts a family-oriented series based on the popular segment of Art Linkletter's House Party (1952-69).

Cosby interacts with kids in the studio and on location, eliciting precious—and unpredictable—remarks. The series also incorporates clips from Linkletter's show, beginning with a compilation of comments on Bible stories. The first studio panel includes a girl who loves goldfish and a boy who found an old love letter written by his dad. There are also kids who explain their New Year's resolutions and a gag involving a boy playing matchmaker for Cosby.

Brenda Blethyn

Brenda Blethyn and Marianne Jean-Baptiste earned Oscar nominations for their incisive performances in writer-director Mike Leigh's largely improvised 1996 drama about hidden truths and class distinctions.

Blethyn plays Cynthia, a working class, single mother who is stunned when a young woman named Hortense (Baptiste) calls claiming to be her daughter. She agrees to meet the upwardly mobile optometrist and then receives an even greater shock: Hortense is black. Rated R for strong language and adult situations. Maurice: Timothy Spall. Monica: Phyllis Logan. (2:25) [Gene Siskel reviews the film on p. 12.]

No hurrah for Geraldo

NBC News president Andrew Lack is foolish to think that NBC News will score a ratings bonanza using the services of Geraldo Rivera [The Robins Report, December 13]. Ratings aside, NBC News certainly suffers a serious loss of prestige and reputation by hiring Rivera, whose style of broadcast journalism is far more reminiscent of Walter Winchell than Edward R. Murrow. Rivera's late conversion from "trash" talk to higher standards is not very convincing.

A Prinze of an actor

Ted Johnson's article, "Prinze Charming" [December 13], was superb. I'm thrilled that Freddie Prinze Jr., son of the late Latino comedian Freddie Prinze, has become an actor of the highest caliber. This entertainment god is going to set the world on fire.

Recalling a wonderful career

I truly enjoyed Michael Sragow's tribute to Jimmy Stewart's cinematic triumphs ["It's a Wonderful List," December 13]. I cheer your efforts to do justice to this outstanding actor. However, it was an oversight not to include "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

♈ ARIES (March 21-April 20): You feel that your progress is being impeded by an authority figure. Actually, you are the one who seems to be treading water for reasons that are unclear even to yourself. Don't rush things—it may be that the time is not right yet.

For your extended Aries horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5558*

♉ TAURUS (April 21-May 21): It seems you are reluctant to commit yourself to a change of course or scenery and it is essential that you distinguish between the real and imagined. No one is trying to trip you up—it's just your insecurities talking.

For your extended Taurus horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5559*

♊ GEMINI (May 22-June 21): You may feel as if the world is conspiring against you, but it isn't. It's simply a case of your abilities failing to match your aspirations. By demanding a little less of yourself, you will be far more impressed by your achievements.

For your extended Gemini horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5560*

♋ CANCER (June 22-July 23): Don't get irritated with the demands of business associates and loved ones—they have their problems too. A Sun-Saturn challenge may add to your frustrations, but everything will look brighter by the end of the week.

For your extended Cancer horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5561*

♌ LEO (July 24-Aug. 23): Saturn's restrictive influence on your ruler, the Sun, means that your patience with routine matters and relationships is wearing a little thin. However, help is on the way and by Friday you will be wondering what all the fuss was about.

For your extended Leo horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5562*

♍ VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23): No matter how delicate your finances, it would be a mistake to reject a chance to enjoy yourself. You shouldn't overreact to something that is far less important than it seems. An easy answer will emerge in the middle of the week—don't reject it.

For your extended Virgo horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5563*

♎ LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23): Divided loyalties are making your life harder than it should be. You must accept that you cannot keep everyone happy all the time. Recognizing your personal priorities is half the battle. The other half is sticking to them.

♏ SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22): You seem to be doing your best to avoid an obligation—which is not like you at all. However, a midweek Mercury-Jupiter alliance will bring both financial and emotional help. Don't be too proud to learn from the experience of others.

For your extended Scorpio horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5565*

♐ SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21): A splendid midweek aspect between curious Mercury and your enlightened ruler Jupiter will provide insight into how best to improve your lifestyle. Don't feel you have to be drastic—there is much to be gained from a subtle approach.

For your extended Sagittarius horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5566*

♑ CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20): Your natural caution will stand you in good stead this week; whatever happens, avoid taking unnecessary risks. However tempting an offer or opportunity, play for time and keep your options open. Even gift horses can bite.

For your extended Capricorn horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5567*

♒ AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19): Distractions are rife this week and you need a very clear idea of your own agenda if you are to avoid getting sidetracked. Cosmic waves that are rocking other boats seem to be keeping yours afloat. Be sure to stay on course.

For your extended Aquarius horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5568*

♓ PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20): You need money, so don't reject an offer of help without examining it carefully. Just because someone's motives are obscure does not necessarily make them bad. Your instincts are powerful weapons—don't ignore them.
